Case Management

Putting the Right Medical Professional on the Case

In the managed care services industry, nurses typically manage the medical portion of claims, serving in the field as the eyes and ears of their clients' claims examiners. At Paladin, we believe that even the most experienced nurses don't always have the medical knowledge and peer-to-peer credibility they need to collaborate with treating physicians for the best possible results.

Paladin's Case Management service assigns the most appropriate medical professional to the case, whether it's a nurse, a doctor, or the coordinated services of both.

PHYSICIAN CASE MANAGEMENT

We assign physicians to any claim that meets certain critical factors and may involve six weeks or more of lost work time, based on predictive modeling. Doctors not only manage the medical aspects of the case, they're also available by phone to consult on medical questions or concerns as they arise. Specifically, Paladin physicians:

- Oversee the patient's medical treatment, rehabilitation progress, prescriptions, and any post-surgical follow-up needs
- Work with the claims examiner and treating physician to ensure the best possible care without incurring undue costs
- Provide updates and assessments through roundtable discussions with claims examiners
- Participate in team efforts to settle and close the case

FIELD NURSE CASE MANAGEMENT

For on-site medical management, Paladin collaborates with nurse case managers in the field to:

- Identify medical barriers to cost-effective treatment
- Establish goals and identify the point at which the case can be closed
- Reconcile case management invoices to prevent duplicate billing and ensure compliance with agreements
